

Opportunity for Young People

Scotland 365 Project

Young Scot, the national youth information and citizenship charity. We have an exciting new project called Scotland 365. As part of this project, through national collections and heritage sites, young people will be able to share new ideas around how to capture Scotland's stories from their perspective.

We have a Jam event this weekend (1st – 2nd December 2017) at the National Museum where young people can share their thoughts and ideas about how we can show how the world how inclusive, open and diverse Scotland is. No previous experience or knowledge required, just some curiosity!

We are appealing to yourselves to gain support for this event, possibly helping us spread the word and invite any young people (16-25) that you think would like to take part.

The page to sign up to the event is down below:

The main event will be taking part on Saturday 2nd December 2017, however, there is an option to attend a 'Meet and Munch' the evening before (Friday 1st December) where you will receive a tour of the museum along with some food.

This is a free event with travel costs and food provided!
