The Transform Foundation places paramount importance on sustainable and scalable projects that make a difference to the greatest volume of people. For each grant programme, Transform Foundation works with selected partners in order to to deploy funding in a secure and scalable way and yield comparative and standardised data to see sector trends to amplify our impact. The partner for the Charity Website Grant Programme is Raising IT who will be designing, building and supporting the websites for successful applicants.

The Charity Website Grant Programme is just one of many programmes the Transform Foundation is running this year. The technology company Farewill are the partner for this programme.

The Foundation is also currently launching its Charity Incubator programme, which will function like many of the leading tech incubators such as Y Combinator, Seedcamp or Entrepreneur First, but purely for the purpose of creating scalable registered charities or social enterprises and Transform Foundation will provide scale up grants.

The Transform Foundation also runs a packed programme of educational events, and has recently rolled out a GDPR series of events and whitepapers with DLA Piper. Other projects include, and the Digital Skills Timebank that co-ordinates corporate volunteer time and matches it to digital projects for charities. These programmes form part of its wider efforts to help the charity sector transition from traditional forms of fundraising and service delivery towards more digitally focused models.
